

She Sings A One Man Band

Litmus A Freeman

When I was playing a Venus night some Irish were in town
They were a bunch of loons but they loved their tunes, so great to have around But my eyes were drawn to a sultry lass who sat there quiet and still and as I played I saw that maiden pop a little pill

I wondered why she'd taken it. How would it manifest?
Was it the flower of some super power, or for a song she might request?
Then as I sang the change began, she started to transform
And with her face the sound of bass and drums she did perform

My eyes began to widen her volume did increase
We'd not gone far when a folk guitar was added to the piece!
And then an Irish fiddle was thrown into the mix
It was so profound the depth of sound as she performed her tricks

And then I heard some Uilleann pipes, a penny whistle too
She played them all as I recall, then suddenly I knew!
I'd heard a tale of one such lass who sang such sounds as these
From low to top the notes she'd hop her musical trapeze

Without a single instrument, she didn't need to play
She'd wow the hoards with her vocal chords from Cork to Mandalay
It was Nadia from Dublin! She's famed throughout the land
With her long dark hair and her fiery stare She Sings A One Man Band

And here she was this very night transforming in my gaze
And before too long I stopped my song as I was so amazed
The noise a-coming from her throat it filled the now still air
I said "Oh shit! The dust I've bit" as the crowd they turned to stare

No longer did they look at me, no longer did they listen
They began to purr entranced by her like kittens they were smitten
I lost my show and want you to know if you are a musician
Please take care, you'd best beware, you'll not fulfil your mission!

If Nadia's in the audience, anywhere you play
And pops that pill of her free will then she will seize your day
She's Nadia from Dublin! She's famed throughout the land
With her long dark hair and her fiery stare She Sings A One Man Band

Oh yes She's Nadia from Dublin! She's famed throughout the land
With her long dark hair and her fiery stare She Sings A One Man Band
With her long dark hair and her fiery stare She Sings A One Man Band
